My Lexus:

Danielle Robertson

Danielle Robertson drives one of Sydney's most recognisable Lexus vehicles. Her GS430 sports "Angels" number plates.

The busy chief executive of Australia's only national, and best known, home and family care agency, DIAL-AN-ANGEL, has had her Lexus for four years.

Danielle says it was the outstanding customer service that impressed her when she went to purchase a new sedan from Lexus of Chatswood.

"The Lexus staff let me have the car to test drive for the weekend, not just for five minutes to drive it around the block."

"The car then sold itself."

It is the quietness and comfortable ride that Danielle enjoys most. She says the GPS is a "godsend" and the music system gets a work out on longer business trips to regional offices and airports. Ferrying her teenage children here and there means safety is also an important factor and Danielle says in a Lexus she knows they are all in a safe, secure car.

She says she definitely is a Lexus customer for life.

"I wouldn't go back to any other car brand now."

Dial An Angel was established in 1967 by Danielle's mother Dena Blackman when Danielle was just six weeks old. Danielle has worked in the business just about all her working life and became CEO in 2003. Dial An Angel operates nationally through 11 offices. Visit www.dialanangel.com
